

Complaints about Police & Crime Commissioners in Wales & Police & Crime Panels Factsheet

What we can do

We can consider complaints about Police & Crime Commissioners (PCCs) and Police & Crime Panel's (PCPs) in Wales but only about how they handled your complaint.

Our remit is limited. This is because crime is a matter for which the Westminster Government retains control; it is not a function devolved to Wales.

The Police & Crime Commissioner is responsible for investigating complaints against the Chief Constable of their police force. The Police & Crime Panel is responsible for considering complaints against the Police & Crime Commissioner (or his or her Deputy).

What we cannot do

We cannot consider complaints about action taken by a Police & Crime Commissioner in relation to the investigation or prevention of crime or any operational decisions. Our role is therefore limited to considering complaints about the way in which a Police & Crime Commissioner or Police & Crime Panel have handled complaints.

Issues to bear in mind

As the Police & Crime Panel is responsible for dealing with any complaints about a Police & Crime Commissioner (or his or her Deputy), if you are dissatisfied with the way in which a Police & Crime Commissioner has handled your complaint we would normally expect you to take your complaint to your local Police & Crime Panel before complaining to us. The Police & Crime Panels in Wales are hosted by a local authority in the relevant police force's area (see details below).

In view of our limited role, any complaints which relate to the way in which the police investigate crime, or take operational decisions are not matters we can consider. Complaints of this nature may be considered by your local police force's Professional Standards Department. If the matter you wish to complaint about is serious or sensitive the Independent Office for Police Conduct may be able to assist you, at: <https://www.policeconduct.gov.uk/complaints-reviews-and-appeals>
